A Letter to the Clerks Behind Every Public Meeting

It's All Hands On Deck Time.

We know you see the pattern because you've told us over and over again: customer service is at an all time low, the products don't work, and agencies are left stitching together a patchwork of half-mature tools that were never designed to work together. There is no complete, cohesive solution because they stopped trying more than a decade ago.

We know what it's like to have to create workarounds for software that doesn't understand how public meetings really run. We see brilliant public servants still leaning on spreadsheets and Word documents because the "enterprise solution" can't handle the real complexity of the work. You feel like you're a line item on your vendor's invoice, not a partner.

Govinity's Open Governance Operating System came to existence because you deserve better.

We began by asking a handful of agencies to build with us, not as early customers, but as Founding Partners shaping every decision we make. We've assembled the most experienced subject matter experts in the space, including early employees of Granicus and ProcureNow, and product leadership at OpenGov. Our founding team has personally designed, built, implemented, and supported legislative management and ERP systems for over 1,600 government agencies. We all work with the empathy and collaboration that makes working with a software vendor meaningful and enjoyable.

We're not building agenda and public meeting management technology from the outside looking in. This is our life work and you are our people.

We're building Govinity for the long haul—because that's the only way to reach the maturity this work demands. It takes commitment. It takes staying power. It takes an all-hands-on-deck team that's willing to stand beside you, not just sell to you.

We're not managing agendas.

We're modernizing open government.
